Care-taker for a worried night,
Venus promised in the setting light –
Waiting in the candle glow,
Heart contemplating all she knows.

More than words is what she wanted –
Timeless, courageous, perfectly undaunted,
Tells it as only a storyteller may,
Fate taught her what to say.

Lavender sky apricot morning,
Swallow in a field performing –
As roses dignified, clear and serious,
Presence golden, challenges various.

You see her world was a real mess,
On account of human foolishness –
And she held the thread to get us out of it,
With a Soul that simply wouldn't quit.
